ADVISORY ACTION

1. The proposed amendment of claim 21 raises 112 first and second paragraph issues. The proposed claim is basically requiring that the automatic reversing means is an on-off switch.
2. Claim 20 required "operating state change means for automatically reversing the direction of rotation..." while claims 21 and 22 depend directly from claim 20 and are phrased as if the were species, whereas there is no disclosure of two such species in the specification.
3. The specification provides no structural information concerning the supposed corresponding structure of the "means for automatically reversing". An applicant may recite a limitation functionally; however, if an applicant chooses to invoke section 112 sixth paragraph, at least on corresponding structure must be described. The application provides no such structural information.
4. Although proposed claim 1 would require the "operating state change device" as part of the claim structure, this would create new combination of limitation that would necessitate further search and consideration.
